

Video title:

What attributes make a bursary student stand out? (Marie Curie)

Transcript:

One: a willingness to learn. This might be demonstrated through them writing their own blog and documenting their learning. It might be that they have a home lab and are doing some ethical hacking, or something like that.

Number two: enthusiasm. I really want to see their love of cyber security shine through when they're talking to me in the interview.

And three: curiosity. Are they curious enough that they're actually going to overcome their nerves and ask questions? It's really important that people are able to ask questions as that's how you learn.